

ABSTRACT

Method and apparatus for remotely controlling an instrument. In representative embodiments, at least one communication is received from each of at least two clients, wherein each received communication conforms to a client specific protocol. It is determined from which client each received communication was received. An application resident on the instrument for which each received communication is intended is determined, wherein at least one application is resident on the instrument. And each received communication is transferred to the intended application.